

Institutional leadership during tough times

Citation for published version (APA):

Zaccaria, G. (2023). Institutional leadership during tough times: explaining the responses of international economic organizations to challenges. [Doctoral Thesis, Maastricht University]. Maastricht University. <https://doi.org/10.26481/dis.20230630gz>

Document status and date:

Published: 01/01/2023

DOI:

10.26481/dis.20230630gz

Document Version:

Publisher's PDF, also known as Version of record

Please check the document version of this publication:

- A submitted manuscript is the version of the article upon submission and before peer-review. There can be important differences between the submitted version and the official published version of record. People interested in the research are advised to contact the author for the final version of the publication, or visit the DOI to the publisher's website.
- The final author version and the galley proof are versions of the publication after peer review.
- The final published version features the final layout of the paper including the volume, issue and page numbers.

Link to publication

General rights

Copyright and moral rights for the publications made accessible in the public portal are retained by the authors and/or other copyright owners and it is a condition of accessing publications that users recognise and abide by the legal requirements associated with these rights.

- Users may download and print one copy of any publication from the public portal for the purpose of private study or research.
- You may not further distribute the material or use it for any profit-making activity or commercial gain
- You may freely distribute the URL identifying the publication in the public portal.

If the publication is distributed under the terms of Article 25fa of the Dutch Copyright Act, indicated by the "Taverne" license above, please follow below link for the End User Agreement:

www.umlib.nl/taverne-license

Take down policy

If you believe that this document breaches copyright please contact us at:

repository@maastrichtuniversity.nl

providing details and we will investigate your claim.

Propositions

- 1) To advance our understanding of the resilience of IOs facing challenges, we must go beyond external factors and account also for IO agency, institutional leadership, and IO responses. The nature of a challenge is not a key determinant of institutional leaders' role in IO responses.
- 2) IO responses generally consist of the early recognition stage (sense-making) and the subsequent solution stage (meaning- and response-shaping). IO institutional leaders can play critical roles in both of those stages.
- 3) Institutional leaders may take critical action to push strategic initiatives (authoritative roles), foster agreement and garner support (facilitative roles), and act as figureheads to publicly defend their IOs (symbolic roles).
- 4) IO leaders will be better at playing a role in IO response processes if their IOs confer them with greater authority and bureaucratic capacity. However, whether IO leaders' actually take the helms of their institution during moments of challenge depends on their leadership competences.
- 5) The Liberal International Order depends on the institutional pillars on which it is sustained. Securing the continuity of such institutions implies securing that of the order.
- 6) Just like their national counterparts, IOs are vulnerable to shocks and pressures. Relying on the insights from the Public Administration discipline is helpful for advancing our understanding of how pressures affect IOs, and how IOs can cope with them.
- 7) The IR scholarship on IOs needs to rethink our understanding of IO agency and its manifestations. More focus on individual leaders and other relevant actors within IO bureaucracies can improve our understanding of how—and under what conditions—IO agency can be observed.
- 8) The WTO is the most central institution within the global trade arena. Nevertheless, its bureaucratic leadership suffers from limited institutional authority. As the Appellate Body crisis shows, the WTO deserves more teeth to ensure its continued and full functionality. For that, much-needed institutional reforms are needed.
- 9) The PhD candidate's best friend is good coffee.
- 10) The PhD candidate's worst friend is any over-imagined worry.