Quality of life, health, and social needs of slum-dwelling older adults in Ghana

by

Priscilla Yeye Adumoah Attafuah

1. The quality of life of older adults in Ghanaian slums is not as poor as hypothesized. (this thesis)
2. A positive change in the environmental domain may increase the quality of life of older adults living in slums in Ghana. (this thesis)
3. Incorporating courses on gerontology in the curriculum of nursing schools in Ghana from the first year instead of only in the final year is essential. (this thesis)
4. Older adults in Ghanaian slums place more importance on perceived health-related needs than on perceived social needs. (this thesis)

5. Nurses should show respect and dignity to all older adults irrespective of their gender, tribe, socio-economic status, creed, or colour.
6. As spirituality plays an important role among slum-dwelling older adults, health professionals might consider collaborating with spiritual leaders to improve health literacy.
7. The United Nations Decade of Healthy Ageing advocates for ageing in place; the findings of this study can be used to inspire policymakers in ways to do so.
8. In a technologically driven world, phone calls and/or audio messages should be considered in the provision of health and social care services for older adults in hard-to-reach settings such as slums.
9. Caring for older adults must be everyone's concern because we all wish to grow old.
10. I pledge to nurse all clients either to good health or to a peaceful death. (Virginia Henderson)
